

Article V

Riveting in its fast paced drama, chilling in its present day truth! Washington D.C. is paralyzed by political corruption and its government is about to shut down. The American people have had enough. They will soon learn there is but one weapon that can crack the stronghold on Capitol Hill--the power of Article V. Renowned Harvard professor, Winston Bernard Huntster II, has just aired a controversial documentary on the History Channel. To the millions of American viewers, it depicts an eerily striking comparison to the egocentric arrogance of the political landscape of present day. Huntster's provocative drama becomes the fuel that will fire a movement to take back Washington D.C. Now, the man behind the firestorm is found dead in Boston Common from a gunshot wound to the head. His death has outraged an angry nation and incited its citizens to take to the streets. It is now up to one man, a Constitutional clause, and the will of the American people to take their country back.
