Excerpt from A Manual of Anatomy, Vol. 2: Containing Rules for Displaying the Structure of the Body, So as to Exhibit the Elementary Views of Anatomy, and Their Application to Pathology and Surgery; To Which Are Added, Observations on the Art of Making Anatomical Preparations

The first dissection of the thigh and leg should be confined to the muscles and ligaments only. The plan which the more advanced student should follow is very different from this which I have laid down for the beginner; I shall not enter upon it at present, but proceed to describe the manner in which the first dissection of the muscles of the Abdomen is to be made. Before commencing the dissection, the fibres of the muscles should be put upon the stretch by placing a large wooden block under the loins, by letting the legs hang over the table, and by throwing the arms towards the head. After the body has been put into this position, an incision is to be made through the integuments, in the direction of the linea alba, extending from an inch above the ensiform cartilage to the symphysis of the pubes.
