

Pugs: How to Be Your Dogs Best Friend: From preparing your home to leash training, health tips and more. (101 Publishing: Pets Series)

They are smart even clever and they know what they want and, in some cases, how to get it. Characterizations of their features include expressive, clownish and cartoonish, but a pug is not just another pretty face. Veterinarian and author Debbie White explains they are that and much more, including intensely loyal and affectionate sometimes to a correctable fault. Despite a dedication capable of producing an invisible umbilical cord, a pug has a line and knows when its owner has crossed it. Against unwelcome restraint or touching, White explains, the dogs warble and scream, mimicking a shrieking child, or produce alien-like vocalizations best described as a screaming turkey in a full-fledged tantrum. Some of the traits for which pugs are appreciated wrinkles of face and folds of coat make them walking ecosystems that require extraordinary care. For their eye-of-the-beholder, they impart a short-faced handsomeness, but unfortunately they may pay the price with labored breathing and the inability to follow a scent. And then there's the flatulence. From preparation of a home in anticipation of a pugs arrival to leash training and detailed looks at the most likely challenges a pug and its owner might face in 15 years or so of life together, White details for readers the ups and downs of owning, caring for, loving and being loved by the dog sometimes referred to by the American Kennel Club as multum in parvo or much in little. About the Author: As a practicing veterinarian with over 17 years of experience, Dr. Debbie White enjoys caring for furry, feathered and scaled patients. She earned a B.S. in Animal Science and Doctorate of Veterinary Medicine from Purdue University in West Lafayette, Indiana. Dr. White is a frequent veterinary contributor on Las Vegas radio and news programming. Since 2008, she has been the featured veterinarian on the weekly satellite radio program, Animal Radio, where she is also known as Dr. Debbie and answers pet owner health questions across the country. Dr. White advocates pet disaster preparedness and serves as a veterinary volunteer with the Medical Reserve Corps. She shares her home with her Yorkie-poodle-shih tzu cross, Boss, and two Labrador retrievers, Magnum and Jade.
