He moves as I would wish him.. Aside Ant. After this, I need not tell his Name: Twas Dolabella. Vent Hes now in C?sars Camp. Ant. No matter where, Since hes no longer mine. He took unkindly That I forbade him Cleopatra & Sight; Because I fcard he lovd her: He conset He had a Warmth, which for my sake, he stifled i For twere impossible that two, so one, Should not have lovd the same. When he departed, He took no leave; and that confirmd my Thoughts. Vent. It argues that he lovd you more than her, Else he had stayd; but he perceivd. you jealous, And would not grieve his Friend: I know he loyes you. Ant. I mould have seen him then ere now. Vent. Perhaps He has thus long been labring for your Peace. Ant. Would he were here. Vent. Would you believe he lovd you? I read your Answer in your Eyes you would. Not to conceal it longer, he has sent A Messenger from C?sars Camp, with Letters.. Ant. Let him appear, i, Vent. Ill bring him instantly. Exit Ventidius, and re-enters immediatelfivitb Dolabella. Ant. Tis he himself, himself, by holy Friendship! Runs to embrace him. Art thou returnd at last, my better Half? Come, Come, give me all my self. Let me not live, If the young Bridegroom, longing for his Night, Was ever half so fond. Dola. I must be filent: for my Soul is busie About a nobler Work: Shes new come home; Like a long-absent Man, and wanders oer Each Room, a Stranger to her own, to look If all be fase. Ant. Thou hast whats left of me. For I am now so funk from what I was, Thou fmdst me at my lowest Water-mark.
