

In the Eye of the Sociopaths Hurricane: Seven Weeks of Rage

It has been said many times that the most dangerous evil comes disguised as everything you have ever wanted. Its true. We see movies and we think of bad guys as people who are clearly evil and ugly...and very obvious. We think they will wear dark colors and ski masks. We think sociopaths are cold-blooded murderers. We believe we can recognize predators when we see them. But when you get involved with a sociopath, everything you thought you knew will be discredited. Yes, they are cruel, but no, they are not obvious. They are charming, romantic, promising, dashing, enigmatic, attractive, tempting, funny, smart, clever, witty, interesting, well-dressed, handsome, and more. They look like your dream lover or your soul mate. They seem that way to many, if not most, people who meet them. Thats why when they begin terrorizing you and you see their true selves, you are often left shocked and dazed and wondering what is wrong with you that causes them to change so drastically. You struggle to change and make them happy to bring back that wonderful lover that you met, but that soul mate isnt coming back. It wasnt real. The trauma and abuse is the real sociopath and they have taken off the mask they used to draw you in. This is my story of meeting, marrying, and dealing with a raging narcissistic sociopath.
