

Interzone #237 Nov - Dec 2011 (Science Fiction and Fantasy Magazine)

When Richard Matheson first saw REAL STEEL, distantly adapted from his 1956 F&SF novella Steel by way of his 1963 Twilight Zone episode, he thought the boxing robots were stuntmen in suits. You can't blame him for being unduly influenced by the memory of the actual story, the entire point of which was that the punched-out human boxer has to don his robots suit himself to fight (and lose) a crucial bout in the new world of posthuman contact sports. But Real Steel is a film from deep inside the new Hollywood, with Spielberg and Zemeckis producing, and has a rather different take on the displacement of humans by machines in the future of spectacle entertainment. Now Hugh Jackman's character is a commitment-phobic bot operator who finds himself saddled overnight with a ten-year-old Spielberg tyke, his son by a conveniently abandoned mom now peremptorily deceased, all ready to bond through a common love of punching the lights out of remote-controlled machine avatars, the only parenting skill a modern father needs... Interzone's movie reviewer Nick Lowe reflects on Real Steel. Read the rest and more reviews plus stories from Lavie Tidhar, Douglas Lain, Caspian Gray & Jim Hawkins. Interzone is a bimonthly, award winning, science fiction and fantasy short story magazine. It contains original fiction and illustrations plus SFF/H related news and reviews of books, movies and DVDs. It is not celebrity oriented. Interzone was founded in 1982 by David Pringle, John Clute, Alan Dorey, Malcolm Edwards, Colin Greenland, Graham Jones, Roz Kaveney and Simon Ounsley. Founding editor David Pringle stepped down in 2004 and the magazine has been published by TTA Press from issue 194 onwards. Interzone celebrated its 25th anniversary in 2007 and continues on a bimonthly schedule. Illustrations are included here but some images were omitted. Interzone 240 was published in print and on Amazon this month. This is a back issue from 2011. Also please tell us if you notice any formatting or layout errors. Post comments on the TTA website forum or TTAs Facebook page (TTA Press) or Twitter. (TTApress) or E mail. - roy (at) ttapress (dot) comThe magazine is regularly shortlisted for prestigious awards, and is a winner of the Hugo and British Fantasy Awards.
