

Darkness: A Short Story

Ever wonder what it would be like to live the same terrifying nightmare over and over again forever? Jack knows. He is lost in the wilderness and he's being haunted by his worst nightmare. Darkness is a 4000 word short story by Mark Edward Hall. Mark Edward Hall writes like a master. Stephen King, yes, but also like Stoker, Poe, and Bradbury, yeah, even Shakespeare...all those good guys we've forgotten. His prose is hypnotic and seductive, visceral, and edgy. He's the real thing. Kiana Davenport, New York Times Bestselling Author of Cannibal Nights and House of Skin. Hall has an uncanny knack for blending vivid, almost poetic prose with visceral images of jaw-dropping horror to great effect. Bram Stoker Award Winning Editor, Vince Liaguno. Poetic and eerily seductive, Hall pushes you to the edge, until you get lost in the beautiful madness of his creations. Midwest Book Review. Hall is rapidly climbing the ladder to stake a claim as one of the dark fiction elite. Morpheus Tales. Mark Edward Hall is the author of five books and more than fifty short stories. His new novel, Apocalypse Island is due out in early 2012.
